Martello towers are a prominent feature in the life and work of James Joyce.

Joyce stayed in the Martello tower in Sandycove, Dublin for a period of six nights in 1904.

The opening scenes of his novel Ulysses takes place here, and the tower is a place of pilgrimage for Joyce enthusiasts, especially on Bloomsday. Known today as James Joyce Tower, it now contains a museum dedicated to Joyce and displays some of his possessions and other ephemera associated with Ulysses.
